„I cannot imagine a more important new innovation than an intensive care unit (ICU). Like Apple and Microsoft changed the world by enabling people to have personal computers and “smart phones”, the ICU envisioned more than 50 years ago by Drs. (Professors) Max Harry Weil, Peter Safar, and William C. Shoemaker and a handful of others has changed the medical world and has become the high quality focal point for the care of critically ill patients.“

To Whom it May Concern;

This is a letter in support of Roman Kula, MD, PhD, for the position of Chief of the Department of Anesthesia and Critical Care at the Faculty Hospital, Ostrava, Czech Republic.

I have visited Dr. Kula several times and made rounds with him on his patients, and I have heard him discuss scientific problems and present his research work at scientific meetings. I have found him to be intelligent, industrious, and well motivated to contribute to clinical science and humanity. He understands the intricacies of clinical research methodology and is able to master and perform complex tasks of physiologic monitoring. He is able to relate physiologic data to the course of clinical diseases and most importantly, to understand the complexity of interrelated physiologic and clinical problems.

He is well motivated to physiologic and circulatory studies, but his primary direction is that of a well trained clinically oriented anesthesiologist and critical care physician. He gives ample indication that he has the right qualifications, the right capabilities, and the right driving motivation to assume the role of Chief of Anesthesia and Critical Care Medicine.

In summary, I wholeheartedly recommend him, feeling that, if given the opportunity, he will contribute richly to medical science, and the Anesthesia Department and will serve well the clinical needs of his patients.

Sincerely,

William C Shoemaker, MD
Professor of Anesthesiology and Surgery,
University of Southern California
